- Q.2. Read the following passage and then answer the question given at the end.
- Space travel is by far the most expensive type of exploration undertaken by men. The vast expenditure of money and human effort being devoted to projects for putting man into space might well be applied to more practically useful and more conducive to human happiness. It is a strange world in which tens of millions of pounds are spent to give one man a ride round the earth at thousands of miles an hour, while beneath him in his orbit live millions for whom life is a daily struggle to win a few coins to buy their daily bread. The money and effort that go into the development and construction of a single type of space-rocket would more than suffice to rid several countries of such so-called diseases as malaria or typhoid fever, to name only two of the diseases, that medical science has conquered but which will still persist in the world simply because not enough money and effort are devoted to their eradication. Why should the richer countries of the world be pouring their resources into space when poverty and disease on the earth are crying out for relief? One could give a cynical answer to this question and assert that man's expensive adventures into space are merely the by-products of the struggle between great powers for prestige and possible military advantage.

- Q.2. Read the following passage and then answer the questions given at the end.

Drug addiction has become a major social problem, and one that particularly threatens young people in their teens and twenties drugs are substances that alter the way the human body works, changing our moods and affecting our behavior. Drug addiction is as old as human society itself but the changes that the twentieth century has brought have made it more universal and more threatening than ever before. When people talk about drug abuse, they do not mean drugs (Medicine) which are sold legally in the market, they are talking about a range of illegal drugs like Cannabis, opium and cocaine. Which cannot be openly sold and used. These drugs are very powerful in their effects, inducing a profound change in mood, it is easy though, for users of such drugs to become addicted to them so that the drugs become a permanent part of their lives and existing without them becomes difficult. The costs of drug abuse today have become enormous both in money and in lives. The trade in drugs and the misery it causes has long been recognized as problem that can only be solved by international effort. One thing is quite clear, drug addiction is such a complex problem that the trade in drugs is so difficult to prevent, that it must be tackled simultaneously at every level, production, dealing, treatment and rehabilitation, No single approach can provide a solution but taking together, they might give some satisfactory results. Lets say no to drugs.
